Title: The Navy at the Olympic Games

Contents:

Military World Games: in 20 years, Brazil left 36th position in the medals board to occupy the rank of military sports power. In July 2011, CEFAN hosted the Naval Pentathlon and Taekwondo modalities during the 5th Military World Games. In its preparation for this great event, which took place in the beginning of 2008, it underwent major renovation of its facilities, revitalizing the water park, the gym, the accommodation and the naval pentathlon track, as well as the construction of the housing building, athletics track and the Functional Rehabilitation Center. Olympics: In 2012, with a direct reflection of the High Performance Athletes Program (PAAR), at the London Olympic Games, the Brazilian team counted on the significant participation of 51 military athletes, and these athletes won five medals, especially the Gold Medal obtained by the Marinheira Sarah Menezes and for the Bronze Medal of the then Marinheira Mayra Aguiar, both of Judo. Faced with the resounding success achieved, the Brazilian Navy, understanding that the PAAR initiative should not be limited to military sport, decided to create a new program: The Navy Olympic Program (PROLIM). The consolidation of the performance of the Armed Forces, particularly the Brazilian Navy, in the Olympic sport, reflected in impressive results, both in terms of the participation of military athletes and, especially, in the number of medals obtained. The participation of the MB Athletes was very expressive in all respects. These athletes made up almost 12% of Team Brazil and managed to obtain 32% of the medals won and, even more impressive, 57% of the Gold Medals.

Title: 3rd Sgt. Polyana Okimoto

Contents:

The 3rd Sgt. Poliana Okimoto swam in the Copacabana Sea for almost two hours, practically all of the time among the first places with whom she disputed the Water marathon of the Rio 2016 Olympics. In the final stretch, for only two seconds apart, he came fourth. Ended the sad but serene test. Despite staying off the podium, he had had his best Olympic participation. He left in the past the nightmare of London 2012, when he was loaded on a stretcher of the Serpentine River after passing out due to hypothermia caused by the cold temperature of the water.

At the age of 33, even without the medal, he crowned his career in the history of the Olympic Games even better than his debut in Beijing, at the time at the age of 25, when he reached seventh. But a few minutes later, a twist would forever change your résumé. French Aurelie Muller was disqualified for having taken a stroke at the Italian opponent, and thus Poliana Okimoto inherited the Olympic bronze, won 20 years after her first lineup to represent Brazil in a competition. It was the tears: it was the redemption I was waiting for.

Title: 3rd Sgt. Rafael Silva

Contents:

Mesmo caindo diante do maior mito da história do judô, o terceiro sargento do Exército Rafael Silva alcançou a medalha de bronze na categoria acima de 100 kg. Do alto dos seus 2,03 metros, o judoca brasileiro, conhecido como Baby, deu ao Brasil a quarta medalha olímpica dos Jogos Rio 2016 e garantiu seu segundo pódio em Olimpíadas. Todas as conquistas foram mérito dos atletas militares do Programa de Alto Rendimento do Ministério da Defesa.

O brasileiro iniciou sua campanha olímpica com duas vitórias por ippon. Na primeira luta, ele venceu Ramón Pileta, de Honduras, e, depois, passou pelo russo Renat Saidov, nas oitavas de final. Com um waza-ari, Rafael Silva, 29 anos, foi derrotado nas quartas de final pelo francês Teddy Riner, invicto há seis anos, atual campeão olímpico e detentor de oito títulos mundiais.

Com chance de pôr a medalha de bronze no peito, repetindo o resultado de Londres, em 2012, Baby foi para repescagem. No embate, enfrentou o uzbeque Abdullo Tangriev e venceu com um yuko.
